Raymond Mhlaba Centre for Governance and Leadership is an entity within the Faculty of Humanities at Nelson Mandela University. The centre focuses on strengthening ethical leadership, effective governance, and public sector capacity through research, training, and strategic community engagement. The centre is proud to offer this short learning programme on disaster management to respond to critical capacity gaps in disaster management by equipping public officials with practical, people-centred, and legislation-aligned skills for strengthening resilience and risk reduction

Course objective

To equip public officials with practical knowledge and essential skills in disaster risk management, including an understanding of key concepts, legislative frameworks, institutional coordination, risk monitoring, and the use of modern digital tools. The programme aims to strengthen municipal and provincial capacity for effective risk reduction, early warning, community resilience building, and integrated disaster response.

Target Participants

Public officials in provincial and local government responsible for disaster management, risk reduction, early warning coordination, community resilience, disaster planning, or related functions.

Course Content

- Foundations of Disaster Management: concepts, risk reduction, mitigation, climate change adaptation
- Disaster Management legislative and policy framework: Sendai Framework, SDGs, Disaster Management Act (2002), Disaster Management Framework (2005)
- Institutional arrangements: roles of national, provincial, and local disaster management centres; coordination mechanisms
- Disaster Risk Monitoring and Analysis:
 - Tools and techniques for risk identification and analysis
 - Early-warning systems and monitoring mechanisms
 - Data and digital technologies including AI, GIS, and real-time mapping tools.
- Training, awareness, and evaluation approaches
- Stakeholder communication, crisis communication, and intergovernmental relations

Course Delivery

- Mode: Face-to-Face
- Venue: Business School, Second Avenue Campus, Nelson Mandela University

Participants who complete the summative assessment successfully are issued with an official Nelson Mandela University Certificate of Competence, while those who attend at least 80% of the sessions will receive a Certificate of Attendance.
